The Financial Times has just published the results of its annual ranking of the world’s best Business Schools in executive education programs for senior managers and executives.

HEC Paris is #1 in the world.

This ranking evaluates open-enrolment programs for individuals as well as custom-designed programs for companies. Mainly based on the satisfaction of participants and businesses, it highlights the quality and suitability of the programs, the coherence of what is being offered and the excellence of the teaching body.

According to Prof. Bernard Ramanantsoa, Dean of HEC Paris, « HEC Paris has always strived to remain close to the ever-evolving needs of businesses. Our Executive Education offer aims to provide individuals and companies with the necessary tools and background to challenge established rules and invent the new social and economic paradigms of tomorrow’s world. »

« This success is the result of a joint effort, and we are pleased to share it with all our executive education participants and partner companies who have placed their trust in our programs. Our pledge, day after day, is to give each of them the means for personal success, with strong corporate vision. Our mission is to support visionary leaders who are able to bring meaning and serve as architects of a responsible world », says Prof. Bertrand Moingeon, Deputy Dean of HEC Paris, in charge of Executive Education and Academic Development.

More:

HEC Paris Executive Education

Press Contact: Laurianne Thoury, 01 39 67 94 23, thoury@hec.fr